 His shackles empty left, himself escaped clean. Fa. Queen.
 A servant commonly is less free in mind than in condition;
 his very will seems to be in bonds and shackles, and desire itself under durance and captivity. South's Sermons.
 The force in fetters only is employed;
 Our iron mines exhausted and destroyed
 In shackles. Dryd. Juv.
SHAD. n. f. A kind of fish.
SHADE. n. f. [reacu, Saxon; schade, Dutch.]
 1. The cloud or opacity made by interception of the light.
 Spring no obstacle found here nor shade,
 But all sunshine. Milton.
 2. Darknes; obscurity.
 The weaker light unwillingly declin'd,
 And to prevailing shades the murmuring world resign'd. Rofe.
 3. Coolness made by interception of the sun.
 Antigonus, when told that the enemy had such volleys of arrows that hid the sun, said, that falls out well; for this is hot weather, and so we shall fight in the shade. Bacon.
 That high mount of God whence light and shade
 Shine both. Milton.
 4. An obscure place, properly in a grove or close wood by which the light is excluded.
 Let us seek out some desolate shade, and there
 Weep our sad bosoms empty. Shake.
 Regions of sorrow, doleful shades. Milton.
 Then to the desert takes his flight;
 Where still from shade to shade the son of God,
 After forty days fasting, had remain'd.
 The pious prince then seeks the shade,
 Which hides from fight his venerable maid. Dryd.
 5. Screen causing an exclusion of light or heat; umbrage.
 Let the arch'd knife
 Well sharpen'd now assail the spreading shades
 Of vegetables, and their thirsty limbs dis sever.

SHA'DOW. n. f. [reacu, Saxon; schadowe, Dutch.]
 1. The representation of a body by which the light is intercepted.
 Poor Tom! proud of heart, to ride over four inch'd bridges,
 to court his own shadow for a traitor. Shake.
 Life's but a walking shadow, a poor player,
 That struts and frets his hour upon the stage,
 And then is heard no more. Shake.
 Such a nature,
 Tickl'd with good success, disdains the shadow
 Which he treats on at noon. Shake.
 The body, tho' it moves, yet not changing perceivable distance with some other bodies, the thing seems to stand still, as in the hands of clocks, and shadows of sun-dials. Locke.
 2. Opacity; darkness; shade.
 By the revolution of the skies
 Night's sable shadow from the ocean rise. Denham.

 On a sweet bed of lillies softly laid. Fa. Queen.
 Here father, take the shadow of this tree
 For your good host. Shake. K. Lear.
 4. Obscure place.
 To the secret shadows I retire,
 To pay my penance till my years expire. Dryd.
 5. Dark part of a picture.
 A shadow is a diminution of the first and second light. The first light is that which proceeds immediately from a lightened body, as the beams of the sun. The second is an accidental light spreading itself into the air or medium proceeding from the other. Shadows are threefold: the first is a single shadow, and the least of all; and is proper to the plain surface where it is not wholly possessed of the light. The second is the double shadow, and it is used when the surface begins once to forsake your eye, as in columns. The third shadow is made by crossing over your double shadow again, which darkness by a third part. It is used for the inmost shadow, and farthest from the light, as in gulfs, wells, and caves. Penham.
 After great lights there must be great shadows. Dryden.
 6. Any thing perceptible only to the sight; a ghost; a spirit; or shade.
 Hence, terrible shadow!
 Unreal mock'ry, hence! Shake.
 7. An imperfect and faint representation; opposed to substance.

 So fair and great, that shadowed all the ground. Fa. Q.
 The Assyrian was a cedar with fair branches, and with a shadowing throud. Ezek. xxxi. 3.
 2. To cloud; to darken.
 Mistake me not for my complexion;
 The shadow'd livery of the burning sun
 To whom I am a neighbour. Shake.
 3. To make cool or gently gloomy by interception of the light or heat.
 A gentle south-west wind comes creeping over flowery fields and shadow'd waters in the extreme heat of summer. Sidney.
 4. To conceal under cover; to hide; to screen.
 Let every soldier hew him down a bough,
 And bear't before him; thereby shall we shadow
 The number of our host, and make discovery Shake.
 Err in report of us.
 5. To protect; to screen from danger; to shroud.
 God shall forgive you Cœur de Lion's death,
 The rather, that you give his offspring life,
Shadowing their right under your wings of war. Shake.
 6. To mark with various gradations of colour, or light.
 Turnsoil is made of old linen rags dried, and laid in a saucer of vinegar, and set over a chafing dish of coals till it boil; then wring it into a shell, and put it into a little gum arabick: it is good to shadow carnations, and all yellows. Pease.
 From a round globe of any uniform colour, the idea imprinted in our mind is of a flat circle, variously shadowed with different degrees of light coming to our eyes. Locke.
 More broken scene, made up of an infinite variety of inequalities and shadowings, that naturally arise from an agreeable mixture of hills, groves, and vallies. Addis.
 7. To paint in obscure colours.
 If the parts be too much distant, so that there be void spaces which are deeply shadowed, then place in those voids some fold to make a joining of the parts. Dryd. Dufresnoy.

 I have shadowed some part of your virtues under another name. Dryd.
 9. To represent typically.
 Many times there are three things said to make up the substance of a sacrament; namely, the grace which is thereby offered, the element which shadoweth or signifieth grace, and the word which expresseth what is done by the element. Hook.
 The shield being to defend the body from weapons, aptly shadow out to us the continence of the emperor, which made him proof to all the attacks of pleasure. Addis.
SHA'DOWY. adj. [from shadow.]
 1. Full of shade; gloomy.
 This shadowy desert, unfrequented woods,
 I better brook than flourishing peopled towns. Shake.

 A sudden youth the groves enjoy. Fenton.
 2. Not brightly luminous.
 More pleasant light
Shadowy sets off the face of things. Milton.
 3. Faintly representative; typical.
 When they see
 Law can discover sin, but not remove
 Save by those shadowy expiations weak,
 The blood of bulls and goats; they may conclude
 Some blood more precious must be paid for man. Mil.
 4. Unsubstantial; unreal.
 Milton has brought into his poems two actors of a shadowy and fictitious nature, in the persons of sin and death; by which he hath interwoven in his fable a very beautiful allegory. Addis.
 5. Dark; opaque.
 By command, e're yet dim night
 Her shadowy cloud withdraws, I am to haste Homeward. Mil. Parad. Lost.
SHA'DY. adj. [from shade.]
 1. Full of shade; mildly gloomy.
 The wakeful bird
 Sings dawning, and in shadiest covert hid Tunes her nocturnal note. Mil. Parad. Lost.
 Stretch'd at ease you sing your happy loves,
 And Amarillis fills the shady groves. Dryd.

SHA

 1. An arrow; a missile weapon.
 To pierce pursuing shield,
 By parents train'd, the Tartars wild are taught;
 With shafts shot out from their back-turned bow. Sidney.
 Who in the spring, from the new fun,
 Already has a fever got,
 Too late begins these shafts to shun,
 Which Phœbus thro' his veins has shot. Waller.
 They are both the archer and shaft taking aim afar off, and then shooting themselves directly upon the desired mark. More.
 So lofty was the pile, a Parthian bow
 With vigour drawn, must send the shaft below. Dryd.
 O'er thee the secret shaft
 That wafts at midnight, or th' undreaded hour
 Of noon, flies harmless. Thomson.
 2. [Shaft. Dutch.] A narrow, deep, perpendicular pit.
 They sink a shaft or pit of six foot in length. Crew.
 The fulminating damp, upon its accension, gives a crack like the report of a gun, and makes an explosion so forcible as to kill the miners, and force bodies of great weight from the bottom of the pit up through the shaft. Woodward.
 Suppose a tube, or as the miners call it, a shaft; were sunk from the surface of the earth to the center. Arbutnot.
 3. Any thing straight; the spire of a church.
 Prædile to draw small and easy things, as a cherry with the leaf, the shaft of a steeple. Peacocks.
SHAQ. n. f. [reacu, Saxon.]
 1. Rough woolly hair.
 Full often like a shaq-hair'd crafty kern,
 Hath he con'erled with the enemy;
 And given me notice of their villanies. Shake.
 Where is your husband?
 He's a traitor. Shake.
 Thou lie'st thou shaq-ear'd villain.
 From the shaq of his body, the shape of his legs, his having little or no tail, the slowness of his gate, and his climbing up of trees, he seems to come near the bear kind. Grew.
 True Wincey broad cloth, with its shaq unhorn,
 Be this the horseman's fence. Gay.

 About his shoulders hangs the shaggy skin,
 The teeth and gaping jaws severely grin. Dryd.
 From the frosty north
 The early valiant Swede draws forth his wings,
 In battailous array, while Volga's stream
 Sends opposite, in shaggy armour clad
 Her borderers; on mutual slaughter bent. Philips.
 2. Rough; rug'd.
 They pluck'd the seated hills with all their load,
 Rocks, waters, woods, and by the shaggy tops Uplifting bore them in their hands. Mil. Parad. Lost.
 There, where very desolation dwells,
 By grotts and caverns shaggy'd with horrid shades,
 She may pass on with unblench'd majesty,
 Be it not done in pride. Mil.
 Through Eden went a river large,
 Nor chang'd his course, but through the shaggy hill
 Pass'd underneath ingulph'd. Milton.
 How would the old king smile
 To see you weigh the paws when tip'd with gold,
 And throw the shaggy spoils about your shoulders. Addis.
 Ye rugged rocks! which holy knees have worn,
 Ye grotts and caverns shaggy'd with horrid thorn. Pope.
SHAGRE'EN. n. f. [shagrin, French.] The skin of a kind of fish, or skin made rough in imitation of it.
